

At the T-junction turn right, passing the cottages at Baildon Place. Follow the lane round to the old steel gate on your left, with PATH marked on the gatepost which takes you up the field hedge on your right up the fields and over two stiles. At the second stile turn diagonally left across the field to Lightcliffe Wood. Follow the wood's curving wall round to the beck, cross over the stile into the field, turn right and follow the side of the beck to a big ash tree with a yellow marker. Head up the field past two more big ash trees and over the double stile in the hedge. Follow the wire fence up the field until it turns left – here you must head straight on to the top of the field, where there is a stone stile in the wall. Climb the stile into the top field and head along the wire fence to the stile leading into the house drive. Continue some 15 metres along the gravel drive and over the stile into the road. Carefully cross the road at Bell House and walk up the road to the lane on the left. This is Royd House.

Follow the lane up past the houses and, as the lane descends to give a good view of Kirkburton, turn off to the right, into the field, by the second gate. Go diagonally down the field, over the stile in the bottom corner, over three more stiles and into Jagger Lane, Thorncliffe. Cross the road, turn uphill for 50 metres, then turn left and head up the track to Thorncliffe, passing through a steel gate and then past the Working Men's Club on your right. Continue straight along the lane just past a new house in the former farmyard on your left into a sometimes muddy lane, passing a green silo and walking 300 metres into the field between the two ash trees.

Pause to admire the wonderful view towards West Nab, Farnley Tyas and Castle Hill.

Turn right along the lane for 50 metres to a gate on your left which leads into a field. Bear half-right and head for the gate in the hedge. Follow the wire fence on your right down the field, over two stiles and a gate, continuing with the wall on your left towards Crow Nest Cottages. (Fine views of the Dearne and Calder valleys).

The path eventually becomes a lane above Crow Nest Cottages. Continue down the path that turns right at the cottages and go down over the stream to Six Lane Ends.

This was in fact the old mediaeval road from Emley to Elland and Halifax.

At Six Lane Ends cross over diagonally left to find Common Lane, an earthen track which goes gently on to Flockton. Follow this lane half a mile, past Doctor Lane End, alongside Flockton Beck to the last house on the right at Common End. Soon after the last house turn right and go between the garden hedge and wall over the stile straight up the field, with the hedge on your left, down over Mouse House Beck. Cross the beck and climb a steep path between oak saplings to a stile at the top. Cross the flat field before you and go over a stile to the old stone wall 75 metres below Kirkby Grange.

Carefully turn right up Clough Road and after 50 metres turn right onto Kirkby Lane. Keep the houses on your left and the field on your right to follow the lane round a Z bend and on upwards for half a mile until you see the farm buildings of Upper Crawshaw before you on the left. As you round the corner there is a ditch on the left – go past the first field gate on the left and at the second turn left over a stile and into the field. Follow the wall on your right down until it bends to the right. Follow it round over the stone stile into the next field. Turn left and follow the field headland edge right down to the bottom corner where it swings right and on to where it opens out left to face Emley Church. Go straight down across the field and over a stile down to the beck. Cross over a wooden bridge and head up the field to the middle of a wall, by a hawthorn bush, and into the graveyard. Just before the steps at the top of the graveyard, turn right into the lane then left along the lane until Church Street, where a right turn takes you back to Emley Cross.

This trail was originally devised by members of the then Emley Footpath Society. The leaflet has been updated by Denby Dale Walkers are Welcome group, with finance from the East Peak Innovation Partnership (EPIP) via the Rural Development Programme for England, jointly funded by DEFRA and the EU and managed by Yorkshire Forward and with a grant from Denby Dale Parish Council.

Emley Boundary Way

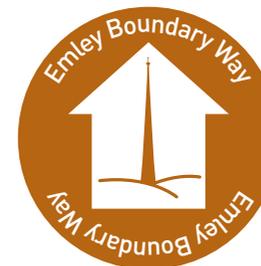

There is an hourly bus service from Huddersfield and Wakefield (Service 232, Huddersfield Bus Company) – 2-hourly on Sundays.

NB Bus details were correct as of May 2010. Please check at www.wymetro.com from where time-tables are available.

Refreshments can be obtained at the Village Stores and the excellent White Horse Real Ale House and Restaurant (tel. 01924 840937) is 200 metres along Chapel Lane to the right.

There is a small village car-park near the Post Office.

Look out for the Emley Boundary Way waymarkers to help guide you around the trail.

Walking in the East Peak

Walking in and around Denby Dale

Emley Boundary Way

A 14-mile walk around Emley and its surrounding countryside. Stout footwear is advisable.

Boundary walks, or Beating the Bounds, were part of English village life from Saxon times, to pass information about the parish boundaries from one generation to the next. They died out long ago in most parishes, but Emley's was revived in 1863 and has usually been held every seven years since then.

The actual Boundary Walk uses private land and is only used once every seven years with the kind permission of the landowners. It must not therefore be used at any other time. The Boundary Way described in this leaflet therefore uses the nearest public rights of way to the boundary – on footpaths, lanes and, by necessity in places, on roads.

Traditionally the walkers meet at Emley Cross car-park, walk down to Flockton Mill and follow the boundary. For anyone wishing to start elsewhere, suitable points with refreshments available would be the Woodman Inn at Clayton West and Thorncliffe Working Men's Club at Kirkburton.

There are interesting historical features on the walk and these are in the text, marked with an asterisk.

Long before coal-mining began, Emley had an iron-mining and smelting industry from about 1200AD – controlled by the monks of Byland Abbey. They had iron ore Bell Pits which can still be seen at the top of Banks Wood, in High Trees and at Bentley Springs. They used charcoal burnt from the trees in Bank Wood to smelt the ore, before the advent of coke. There was an iron furnace in Bank Wood whence Furnace Grange gets its name. The name Grange indicates the monastic links, hence the names ending in Grange at Kirkby, Furnace, Bentley and Thorncliffe. The old Wakefield packhorse way came from Emley down Thorncliffe Lane and Lezzes Lane across to a ford in Bank Wood and on to Midgley and Horbury. Pack horses then took the iron ingots away to Wortley Forge for making into ironware.

Lezzes is the Emley name which comes from lazars who were lepers in the Middle Ages and who lived in crofts down Lezzes Lane.

On the church wall by the war memorial is one of the stone crosses of the Knights Hospitallers or Order of St. John. These men looked after sick people in the village.

Coal-mining was the main industry from about 1750 all round Emley Parish. Until the closures in the 1980s, pits within the parish were at Emley Moor, Springwood and at Park Mill, Clayton West, as well as many day-holes. There were also Coal Screens, Coke Ovens and Railway Sidings for Emley Moor pit at Park Gate, Skelmanthorpe.

The mediaeval gems on the trail are of course St. Michael's Church, Emley and the Pack Horse Bridge at Park Mill, Clayton West.

Then there is the 16th century Kirkby Grange on the way to Flockton Mill.

Emley Boundary Way

Starting point: Emley Cross, by the village Post Office

Walk down Church Street, passing the fine mediaeval St. Michael's Parish Church* and the Knights Hospitallers Cross* in the church wall.

Continue towards Flockton, past the 16th century Kirkby Grange*, taking great care on the narrow bends.

At Flockton Mill turn right onto Mill Lane for 100 metres, turning off to the right after the bridge. Go round to the left of Mill House, along the beck and over the stile. Keep along the bank for 100 metres, thence go forward to the biggest tree in the group of trees in front of you and over the stile. Cross two more stiles and fields to the concrete lane just below Furnace Grange*. Cross over the lane and over the stile opposite and cut across the field to the marker post and stile in the hedge. Cross into the next field and, with the hedge on the left, go 100 metres to two trees in the hedge and then cut diagonally right to Clough Beck stone clapper bridge with its stone stile. Turn left uphill and follow the hedge on your left, up over the stile and across the big field into Lezzes Lane* (marked as Leisure Lane on the OS map).

Pause to look at Bank Wood* on your left and forward to High Trees with its two remaining bell pits*.

Go straight on over the stile in front of you and across the fields, with the hedge on your left, for 400 metres, to a double right-angled stile. Turn left here, leaving the Kirklees Way, and go down the middle of the long field to the bottom at Bank Wood, and over the stile to Cherry Tree stepping stones.

Do not cross over but turn right and with the beck on your left go across the wooden plank over the Little Dike, up and over the stile. Bear half right across the field between the two trees, to the top hedge, where a field lane starts. With the hedge on your right walk along to Bentley Grange Farm*, with a hen house on the left and farm buildings on the right, through a steel gate and into the farm lane, leading into the road at Woodhouse Lane. Careful!! Turn left down to the junction with the main A636.

At the junction turn right and walk along the pavement for 600 metres past Spring Wood*, finally crossing over onto Litherop Lane (signposted High Hoyland). 300 metres down the lane, at a footpath sign, turn right over the stile, down into the field and, with the River Dearne on your left, head for the trees at the top left-hand corner of the field. Cross the stile and go 50 metres to the next stile behind the tree in front of you. Climb left over the stile, turn right and go across the middle of the field to the stile on the lane. Over the stile turn left, along the lane and over the Dearne bridge. Soon, opposite the gate of the water treatment works, turn right along a concrete lane, with a hedge on your left, to the steel gate. Cross over it and, with the hedge still on your left, cross the field into the lane and follow it past the factory on your right.

At the car-park in front of the factory go over the stile on the right and follow the pavement past the factory to the bottom of the car-park.

Follow the lane to just before the bridge, then turn left over the stone stile. The Dearne is now on your right – follow the path alongside it. The path then crosses a wooden bridge over the Dearne and now you will have Blacker Wood Beck on your right. The railway embankment is now a field-length away on your left.

Keep on this lane in the valley bottom, with the railway banking on your left and the beck on your right, for over half a mile past other paths and into open fields. Continue along – do not go up the track under the railway! Eventually you will come to Blacker Wood and a "permissive path" which takes you over a wooden bridge and stile into the wood. The path is twisting but wide. Go through the wood until you see the end and fork right at the wooden marker post. As you reach the end of the wood, turn right, down the wall side and down the steps. Go over the wooden bridge and follow the path round left to the wooden stile. Climb over into the field and go straight up to the lane. Turn left into the lane and go along to Park Gate.

At the road turn left downhill 50 metres, crossing over just before the bridge and turning right into the lane. With the beck on your left, follow it past the newly-restored Park Gate houses and on for half a mile to Baildon Place.

As you pass along it is hard to imagine this was the site of busy coal screens, railway sidings and coke ovens for Emley Moor pit*.
